BOLOSSY KIRALFY'S
MARVELOUS SPECTACLE
CONSTANTINOPLE
OF EUROPEAN FAME.

TECK THEATRE,
BUFFALO, N. Y.
PAN-AMERICAN SEASON.

Buffalo, June 12, 1901.

MR. RICHARD K. FOX:

Dear Sir—The portrait of myself, which you published in a recent issue of the POLICE GAZETTE, is one of the best I have ever seen, and I am particularly gratified with its appearance in the Greatest Sporting Weekly in the World.

During my travels, which, as you perhaps know, have been worldwide, I have seen the GAZETTE on sale everywhere. Its popularity seems to be unbounded, and its circulation must be enormous.

I remain,

Yours sincerely,
B. KIRALFY.

NOTE.—Mr. Bolossy Kiralfy, who is one of the greatest spectacular producers and originators in the world, is responsible for the success of "Constantinople," now appearing in the Exposition City.

Good Character Photographs of Vaudeville Performers Will be Published in Half-Tone in the "Police Gazette" Free of Charge.

Master De Lisle, boy juggler, opened this week on the Eastern circuit of parks.

W. F. Clark and Fred Burch are managing the theatre at Virginia Beach, Va., this summer.

Billy Dockstader, who is running a big show at Atlantic City, N. J., has acquired a fine coat of tan. Ocean breezes did it.

Madge Denning is making her three pickaninies hustle these days. She says they work better when it's 95 degrees in the shade.

Ed F. Rush's Burlesque Summer Stock Company has gathered in McFarland and Murray for the rest of the "wahn weather."

Charles W. Goetz will open his Excelsior Extravaganza Company on August 25. It's a little early, but he's a hustler and wants the money.

Kitty Pembroke, Nellie Johnston, Dollie Le Claire, Minnie Young, Madge Shirley and Nellie Dun-

Millie Ani, who looks down on folks because she's an aerialist, has landed the Keith circuit.

Madeline Sadol, who sings, and Harry M. Price, who acts, have begun their work in the parks.

Alice M. C. Allen, who has been getting big money for her musical act, is now spending it at her home at Worcester, Mass.

Hugh Connelly is doing well in his lightning change act. He is hustling in the small towns and the big cities will get him later.

Williams and Murray say they are going to take things easy this summer. That's why they are on the New England circuit of parks.

Edward Lacy and Florence Mantell have a repertoire of acts now. They read the writings of "Chicot" and seem to profit thereby.

Ellington C. Balfour and May McCrystal, society travesty performers (isn't that too lovely for anything?), had a very fine time the week they played at East Side Park, New Orleans.

Flo and Grace Morrison have a new act for which they expect to get money enough to buy diamonds; not stage gems, but the real things.

Collins and Hardt are drawing salaries from the Beautiful Orient Company at Pan-American Exposition. No hustling for dates this summer.

Grover C. Johnson, boy buck and wing dancer and baton spinner, will do his stunt with Greene and Tilton's Big United Minstrel Carnival next year.

L. Lawrence Weber has gone to Europe to look for novelties for next season. If he wants the genuine article he needn't go further than Paris.

James F. Daly, of Morris and Daly, doesn't like his name. He says there are too many Dalys in the business. He will be called Corbely in the future.

Marion and Pearl have got enough money out of vaudeville to start a summer show. They're acrobats, that is why they are juggling with fate these dog days.

The Wiltsies, who are nice girls and good performers, announce that letters will reach them if addressed care of Phil Sheridan's City Sports next season.

The "Fannie Hill" people have separated for the summer; show closes this month; prosperous season? "Of course, killed 'em dead; S. R. O. every show." Good.

Harry L. Newton and Aaron S. Hoffman have a burlesque on Nat Goodwin's "Merchant of Venice." A Shakespearean burlesque in vaudeville seems to be about the limit.

Lou Middleton, who has just returned from London, brings with her a medal which was given to her by the chappies, who bestowed upon her the title of champion chorus girl of the world. That's all right but upon what does she base her claim to the title?

Chas. W. Goetz, being unable to secure a good Hebrew comedian, has finally decided to play the character in his Excelsior Extravaganza Company himself.

Billy L. Koessler has a new partner in Johnny P. Rogner. They will appear in a one-act farce called "Looking for a Job." It's a very suggestive title, isn't it?

Harry La Belle is hustling over the West Virginia and Ohio circuits. He is a black-face comedian and bars nothing, from a club show to the Metropolitan Opera House.

Here is the pay roll of Harry Ward's Minstrels, which opened the season on June 10: Harry Ward, manager; T. H. Murphy, business manager; W. F. Mason, musical director; Monroe La Rose, Walt Wilson, Jack Hood, Harry Sylvester, Clarence Rummell, Charles Flake, Ernest Garrett, Mont. Howard, Will Frank, Holly Rossmuth, Ed. Deagle, Johnny Ware, Carl Cameron, Fred Lickteig, "Pick" Lyons, Billy Powers, Arthur Buckner, Harry Van Fossen, George Kane.

Bert Martin has gone to Nome City, Alaska. He heard that the miners threw gold nuggets to performers. They do, but the performers are the kind that wear dresses.

Bernard and Story did their "Two Tads on One Wire" act at Terminal Park last week. This week

THE GREAT RICHARDS.

You Might Think That SHE Was Very Pretty, but HE is a Dancer.

they are amusing the patrons of Pfefer's Rustic Theatre, and next week their trunks will be at Prospect Park, all in Peoria, Ill.

Barry and Hennessy have closed the season of their Bright Light Comedy Company (never heard of it), and have gone home to Utica to think up something good for the next time.

Barlow & Wilson will open their show on August 20 with new cars and new clothes; also a few new ideas; only new money taken at the box office. Nothing like being particular.

Flossie La Fields has been induced to sign with May Howard's aggregation of burlesque beauties for next season, so she doesn't have to worry about the hard winter that is prophesied.

Eckler's Columbia Hall and Garden, Utica, N. Y., opened the summer season on June 10. Barry and Hennessy, Dorothy Bennett, Bertha Kellogg and Lottie Freeman were on the bill.

Clark Ross and May Porter have signed for a season of thirty-five weeks with the Excelsior Extravaganza Company, to tour under the management of Chas. W. Goetz, opening Aug. 25.

Craig and Ardell, last season and next with Phil Sheridan's City Sports Company, are doing a little at the parks just to keep the dollars coming in. Perhaps they'll buy a nice farm some day.

Radford and Winchester, who do comedy, juggling, singing and dancing, which is enough for any two sane men, call their sketch "William Tell Told Bad." A map ought to go with it.

Hi Henry's Minstrels didn't do a thing up in Buffalo but get the money. They were re-engaged for another week and by that time the boys were all calling the Midway girls by their first names.

Tony Pastor liked Clayton and De Shon's act so well that he re-engaged them for August 5. A performer would sooner have Tony Pastor's endorsement than Keith's and Proctor's put together.

Hi Wallace, the high diver and aerial gymnast, together with Millie and Verna Von Lears, will be known as the Shelby Trio. They will be at Tanner's Kennywood Park, Pittsburg, for fifteen weeks.

Kitty Miley is now a member in good standing of the Independent Order of Pinks, whatever that is. It must be a joke, for Max and Sam Brooks were present at the initiation. Kitty's a pink, anyhow.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Chick have finished playing dates for a while and are going to try and pilot their own company through a series of pay days. Mr. Chick is a featherweight, but he's fine in a dress suit.

Prince Albene and Miss La Brant, the comedy second sight performers, are fixing up a new act for one of Hurlig & Seamon's companies. They know the money is good and they don't need second sight, either.

The Shantytown Trio is the latest. It is composed of Joe J. Mackie and the Joyces, and they call their act "One Night in Irishtown." To make it the real thing they ought to be policemen and carry night sticks.

Murphy and Nolan, professionally known as "The Two Irish Aldermen," have quit working for awhile and will entertain their friends at Murphy's cottage, The Aldermen's Inn, at Bay Ridge. That's the way to do it.

Little May Hoey, who is really a big girl now, although not too big, opened what vaudeville folks call her summer season, at Painted Post, N. Y., this month. The name sounds like an Indian agency, doesn't it? She will close in July and be a summer girl at Bath Beach.

She Carries a Vicious Spear but the Danger Lies in Her Glances.

bar will be with the Jolly Grass Widows next season, as usual, and the POLICE GAZETTE will print their photographs if they will send them in.

It's Sydney Grant and Elseeta now. They are booked up to May 5, 1902, and it must be awful to think of working up to that date without a rest.

Koppe, a clever little juggler, who will be a feature some day, is steadily improving. He used to have a hard time getting dates, but they know him now.

Georgie Huntington, the descriptive vocalist, has gone with her father to the Buffalo Exposition. She will rest her voice and see the sights at the same time.

Phillips Coup, Joe Devirne, Skerbeck Family, Ida, Amanda, Pauline, Joe, Anton, Frank. Musicians—Fred Meier, Frank Holloway, Mr. Herrick, Otis Miller, Ed Darbruch, Herman Krone, George Krone, E. E. Berse, Anton Skerbeck, Arthur Robinson.

A MIX-UP IN THE CABIN.

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.]

A man doesn't as a rule object to being thrown into the arms of a beautiful and well-formed woman, and there are times when the woman doesn't object, either. The involuntary hug in this case occurred in the cabin of a handsome sailing yacht while off Block Island. The owner, his wife and a gentleman friend were in the cabin drinking wine when a heavy sea hit the vessel and she heeled over. The guest was thrown without an instant's warning into the arms of his hostess, while the host was slammed on the floor with such force as to sprain his wrist.

"If you had been where you ought to have been," remarked the guest, "you wouldn't have hurt yourself."

"Where was that?"

"In your wife's arms, where I was."

Then they had another bottle.

there would have been a story in the papers that would have been nothing short of startling.

The girl in the story had stage aspirations and wanted to be a star. She had tried to get into several companies, but without avail. Finally she received an offer from a well-known manager who announced that if she would wear tight he would engage her. The idea shocked her at first, but at last she concluded to try it in the hope of getting something better later on. The first week was enough for her, and she became very despondent. She wanted to resign, but was told that she could not. Then one night she looked out in the audience and saw two young men of her acquaintance. They recognized her, and without waiting for the act to finish she left the stage. She went at once to her dressing-room, and obtaining a revolver, fired a bullet in her side.

The doctor who was called in to attend her, says she will soon recover.

There are two girls of Mt. Clemens, Mich., who will in the future fight shy of a swing unless they are quite sure the rope which holds it is unusually strong. They were both on the same swing the other day, having what girls of an impressionable age call a "perfectly lovely time," and were being pushed by a young man with a "sweet blonde mustache, when the overburdened rope broke.

It isn't necessary to go into details, for the artist has done all that is necessary in that line. Suffice it to say that on their way home they each bought a bottle of liniment.

POPULAR RESORTS

The Central House Bar of Allentown, Pa.

OWNED BY W. J. WELSH.

A Favorite Place for Many of the Sporting Celebrities.

The Central House, situated at 719 Front street, Allentown, Pa., is one of the most popular resorts in the city, and the photograph which is reproduced on another page of this issue was expressly taken for the POLICE GAZETTE. All the leading sports of the Sixth Ward hold forth here, including the Hon. John P. Gallagher, president of the Jordan Rangers, manager of the Hibernia running team, matchmaker of the Ridgeway Athletic Club and one of the managers of "Kid" Ferry, Allentown's favorite pugilist; Daniel Dougherty, better known as the "Auburn Kid," who is clever with the mits and holds a sprinting record of 100 yards in 16½ seconds; Con Mundy, an all around sport; Mr. Harkins, a charter member of the Hibernia Fire Company; Joe Cramsey, a bar clerk and all around sporting man; Dan McFadden, one of the most efficient runners on the Hibernia running team; Little Hughey Harkins, a noted game cock and dog fancier, and one of the most notable figures at the ringside, who always has a roll to back "Kid" Ferry; his famous dog's name is Sport; Edward Mulligan, secretary of the Ridgeway Athletic Club and all around jolly good fellow; Michael Gallagher, a prominent member of the Hibernia running team and well known in sporting circles. This resort is Charles McKeever's favorite stopping place when in the city, as he is a warm friend of the proprietor, W. J. Welsh, backer of "Kid" Ferry, and manager in connection with J. P. Gallagher.

The bar of this popular resort is well stocked with the choicest line of wines, liquors and cigars and presided over by the able and obliging assistants, James Magee and William Harkins.

The proprietor, Mr. Welsh, is a prominent member of the Keystone Athletic Association, Ridgeway Athletic Club and the Foresters. Business is always brisk as Mr. Welsh has numerous friends and treats all strangers as old acquaintances. When in the vicinity pay him a call. You will be treated right, receive your money's worth and be delighted with your visit.

BODY OF A WOMAN

DECOMPOSED AND FEARFULLY MUTILATED

FOUND IN A SOAP BARREL

Unsuspecting Workmen in a Lye Factory Paralyzed at the Ghastly and Unexpected Find.

BELIEVED A MURDER HAS BEEN COMMITTED.

Drunken Berry Pickers of Indiana, Who Wanted to Dance With Their Women Co-laborers, Have a Free Fight on a Farm at New Albany.

Human bodies have been found in some very queer and out of the way places, but it has remained for Pittsburgh, Pa., that city of sensations, to furnish something new in the way of tragedy and mystery.

Some workmen who were employed removing animal fats and other materials used in making fertilizers, recently made a horrifying discovery upon opening one of the barrels. It was found to contain the badly-mutilated body of a woman.

According to the usual custom, the barrel containing "vat refuse" is placed close to the vat and the pieces loosened on top first when the entire mass is later tossed into the steaming space to be dissolved by the steam and acids.

The barrel in question had nothing about it to distinguish it from dozens of others brought in by the drivers of collecting wagons. When it was taken over near the edge of the vat the first thing to meet the gaze of the workmen was a cow's head. This was over a quantity of straw. Whenever any substance like straw or wood is found, the same is removed before consigning the load into the liquid.

This the workman proceeded to do. He found the straw to be wet and in places saturated with blood. With the nonchalance of one whose daily routine accustoms him to such work he went on pulling out the straw. He reached down and found a finer substance than straw. He pulled on it and as it came to the surface he saw that it was human hair. It, however, would not yield readily to his efforts to drag it out, and carefully setting aside the portion of straw yet remaining he peered into the barrel. He was rendered almost speechless with surprise. There was the upturned face of a human being.

He was transfixed for a moment, but later gave a cry of mingled horror and surprise. The other workmen heard him and looked up. Above the noise of the steaming vats, the rattle of the machinery of the mixing apparatus and the ordinary clatter of barrels he made himself heard and called the others over.

One came and looking into the barrel fled from the scene. A number of drivers were near at hand and they hastened over to where the barrel stood. One with more self-composure than the rest turned the head slightly and pulled all the straw out. Then the contents were exposed to view. The body was that of a woman entirely naked and bent recumbent with the head pressed down between the knees and slightly turned to one side, exposing a portion of the face.

The driver seized the body under the arms and withdrew it from the barrel, placing it on the floor in the vat room. There were several rudely inflicted cuts on different parts and the legs at the knees were hacked as if with the intention of severing the same.

It could not be determined whether it was that of a middle-aged or young woman, but the color of the hair, which was jet black, would indicate that the woman was young. The find so effected the workmen at the factory that the works were closed down for the remainder of the day.

The affair has since remained a deep mystery, and many seem to be of the opinion that a murder has been committed and the criminal has made this novel but fearful attempt to dispose of the remains of his victim. In view of the fact that as a rule the contents of the barrels are dumped into the vats without investigation, it was only by the merest chance that the gruesome discovery was then made.

The authorities propose to make a thorough investigation, and in the meantime the ghastly find is the sensation of the day, and many theories are advanced, but there is absolutely no clue.

Berry Pickers Wanted to Dance.

After the berry pickers employed by a man near New Albany, Ind., got through the other night his place looked as if it had been struck by half a dozen heavyweight cyclones. The wife of the farmer was badly injured from blows which she had received, and one of the fighters had a gunshot wound that may land him in the six feet of earth which is the inheritance of every dead man, be he poor or rich.

After the row, and when the smoke of battle had cleared a bit, the sheriff and a constable gathered in half a dozen of the combatants and locked them up in the local jail.

On the large berry farms in the vicinity berry pickers, women and men, are imported by the hundred from the surrounding counties, and it is customary for them to camp during the season in rude buildings that are built for them on the different farms.

On the night of the big fight, as it is called out in New Albany, after the pickers had received their week's wages, some of the men went to Edwardsville, a nearby village, and got drunk.

When they returned, shortly after 8 o'clock, they brought a fiddle and went to the house that was occupied by the women pickers for the purpose of having a dance.

The family objected to this programme and notified a neighbor, who went over and told the men to return to their quarters and keep quiet.

This angered them, and when the members of the farmer's family insisted that they should leave the place the berry pickers attacked the party and a desperate fight ensued. A dozen or more of the participants were more or less injured, but the only ones who were seriously hurt were the farmer's wife, who sustained a dislocation of her right shoulder and was badly cut and bruised about the head and face, and one of the pickers, who was shot in the right side with a shotgun in the hands of the woman's brother.

erable importance. Concerning one of his exploits a Chicago newspaper says:

"With a motorman lying stunned on the fender, passengers on a Wallace street electric car yesterday morning were saved from a collision with a freight train at Forty-seventh street by the cool-headedness of Officer M. J. Gallery of the Stock Yards station. John Edwards, the motorman, lost his balance while trying to scrape the snow off the glass window in front and fell, striking his head on the fender. Several passengers heard his cry as he fell, and, looking ahead, saw freight trains darting back and forth on the Chicago Terminal railroad's tracks, scarcely 100 feet distant. Women screamed and men rushed for the rear platform. Officer Gallery rushed to the front platform, seized the lever, threw off the current and applied the brakes, stopping the car within a few feet of the crossing. Edwards soon revived and continued on his trip."

INVETERATE PLAYER.

A New Jersey Woman Creates a Sensation by Painting Her House.

A pretty girl of Parkersburg, Pa., who is but sixteen years old has developed into a most inveterate gambler. Her passion for games of chance seems to be uncontrollable. Her mother has pleaded with her, but argument seems of no avail, and now she has decided to ask the authorities to send her to a reformatory.

The mother says that she cannot account for the strange infatuation of her daughter. The girl is not perturbed by her mother's attempt to place her in restraint, but she says that she is beyond the age when she can be committed to the girls' reformatory, and, besides, she has money of her own with which to fight her case and take care of herself.

"You see," said the girl, "I have money, and I can get more from the same source." And she displayed a huge roll of greenbacks.

"I like the games. I like poker best of all the card games, but I like to shoot craps and play roulette, for the action is quicker and possibilities of winning larger and the interest more exciting and exhilarating. I learned to play cards at my own house, and I don't think it any worse for a girl to gamble for money than for prize pictures, silver ornaments or porcelain bric-a-brac.

"I have been a lucky player, and I intend to stick to it, for I can make my living at it better than at anything else. Father is gone, and I have no brothers to depend upon, and if I propose to make my living by decent and honest gambling I don't think it's anybody's business, do you?"

The youthful player is known among all the men who frequent the gambling resorts in the Fairmount coal region, and many of them have played poker and lost to her. She is a shrewd player, remarkably cool and is very refined in manner.

Woman Paints Her House.

There has been a strike of house painters in Trenton, N. J., and business has been brought to a standstill on that account, but a woman who has a pretty home on Rusling avenue showed her independence by going out the other day, and after investing in paint and brushes undertook the single handed job of painting her own house.

She is self-reliant and young, and she had contracted for the work before the strike. When she found it was to be interfered with she at once visited a paint store and told the proprietor that she wanted enough paint to give her dwelling two coats, inside and out. The paint was supplied, then brushes were asked for.

"Now," she said, "I want a ladder, and I want a strong one."

"Are you going to use it yourself?" asked the paint store man.

"Yes," replied the woman, "I'm getting tired of waiting for the painters. I'm going to do the work myself. I never had any experience, but I don't see why anybody with common sense can't put paint on boards."

The ladder was sent around to her house, and with the assistance of a couple of men, she set it up and, mounting it, began to put on the paint. She worked all day, and at night was so well satisfied with what she had accomplished that she said she would finish the job whether the strikers settled their trouble or not.

The plucky woman was watched by a curious crowd while she wielded the brush.

CHRISTY MATTHEWSON'S SUCCESS

RECALLS THE TWIRLING "PHENOMS" OF OTHER DAYS

AS A BASEBALL PITCHER

Some of the Sphere Artists Who Gained Distinction in the Early Times of the National Game Had Envious Reputations.

EVERY SEASON BRINGS ITS CROP OF MARVELS.

Exploded "Phenoms" the Rule Rather Than the Exception---Careers of the Most Successful Are Brief---Matthews and Galvin Lasted Longest.

The name of "Christy" Matthewson, the phenomenal pitcher of the New York baseball team, revives memories of other twirling wonders of the past decade, clever handlers of the sphere who have passed on and out of the game, leaving records of more or less prominence in baseball history. No glory is so evanescent as that of a baseball pitcher. One year he is a king and the next no dog is so low as to do him homage. The career of the average pitcher is sadly brief. After years of earnest endeavor he probably succeeds in becoming efficient in his line, and then after two, three or four seasons of prominence he drops out to be heard of no more. If he be a particularly bright light in his line no player is made so much of for the time being. He is lionized by the press and people, but at the end of his brief, meteoric career he is turned out without a word of regret and the world soon forgets he ever existed.

Every season there bursts upon the startled vision of the baseball public a horde of phenomenons, who bloom, blossom and fade in a single essay and explode with a report that can be heard all over the land. That class of pitchers has come to be regarded as a regular feature of the season's campaign, without which the pennant struggle would be incomplete.

There is, perhaps, nothing that affords the grand stand occupant more enjoyment than to be present when a young man, who has been heralded as a "wonder," enters the box and faces a team of experienced hitters. About the third inning, when some forty odd hits have been made and the young man is gently but firmly removed from the box, the average crank laughs in ghoul-like glee as he takes from his pocket a notebook and adds another name to the mortality list of ambitious but unripe pitchers.

A score of names of men who a dozen years ago were famous on the diamond are seen no more. This leads to the thought that the career of the average baseball pitcher is a short one. Only those who take the utmost care of themselves survive more than a few years. In the majority of cases when a young man makes a success in the box the high opinion he always held of himself is multiplied to such an extent that he is barely able to find space between earth and sky in which to carry his head. This self-esteem would not hurt the young man's ability as a pitcher, but it is usually followed by a system of dissipation that in a short time destroys his command of the ball, speed and curves. That is the history of dozens of young pitchers who, had they taken proper care of themselves, might be doing effective work in the box to-day.

Too much self esteem was the cause of the downfall in public interest of Amos Rusie, Matthewson's immediate predecessor on the New York team. Rusie's difficulties with the New York management disgusted the patrons of the game in the metropolis and led to several years of enforced retirement from which he has just emerged to demonstrate whether his effectiveness as a twirler is as good as it was in the good old days when the announcement that he would pitch was enough to bring the baseball "fans" to the Polo Grounds in thousands.

When baseball was first firmly established by the organization of the National League, Al Spalding of the Boston, and Dick McBride of the Athletics of Philadelphia were the crack twirlers of the country. Those were the days of straight-arm pitching. Jim White, familiarly known as the "Deacon," was Spalding's catcher and was considered the best in the country. He stood very erect behind the bat and was a splendid thrower to bases. John Clapp was backstop for McBride and was rated next to White in the position. Afterward Clapp went to St. Louis and played with the Browns. In those days pitchers did not have the speed they now have, and one man would go into the box for his club every game during the season. It was not nearly so hard work as the swift throwing of the present day and it was also much lighter for the catchers. McBride dropped out of sight soon after the organization of the League and was heard of no more. Spalding served for some time afterward and is now president of the Chicago Baseball Club, the head of the largest sporting goods house in the country and a man worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Bond of the Hartford and Bradley of the St. Louis Browns introduced the underhand throw, which at the time was considered very speedy. Both became crack twirlers, Bond leading the country with Bradley right at his heels. About the same time Nichol and the "Only Nolan" bobbed up as phenomena with their curves, but their fame was very short-lived. For a year or so they puzzled the country and struck out numbers of batsmen in every game, but the players soon got onto their style and hammered them out of the box. Both players made their fame while attached to clubs not members of the League. Nichol was afterward signed by the Browns, but proved a failure. Devlin of the Louisville--then in the League--had a particularly swift underhand throw and came to the front as a pitcher. He was signed by the St. Louis Club, but never played as he, Hall and Craver, all of the same team, were expelled for selling games. This broke the St. Louis team, which would certainly have been champions of the League that year.

Of the old timers none kept their reputations as long as Bobby Mathews and Jim Galvin. Of the two Galvin was the greater pitcher. Until a few years ago he had for several seasons stood at the very top of pitchers, while Mathews was really very weak long before he was finally retired, and at no time could he speed and vigor he once possessed, and he was very successful.

In addition to the above list, there were many men whose feats in the box earned for them fame and cash. What has become of them? They seem to have faded from view. What has become of Fred Goldsmith, that big, plump, self-satisfied fellow to whom all Chicago bowed down in the early '80s? The announcement that "Goldy" was to pitch was heralded as a sure victory for Anson's team, and Fred entered the box with an air which seemed to say: "Well, now you fellows will save time by forfeiting the game. You can't win, for you can't hit 'em. 'See?' And it almost invariably turned out that way. But finally "Goldy" got a pain in the arm, lost his speed, and was set adrift. He had a stormy career as an American Association umpire, and at last account was mixing refreshing beverages in a Detroit sample room.

Then there was that short, but stocky Larry Corcoran, another Chicago hero. He was the pitcher whose father overheard the remark to the effect that Larry was not well supported. In high indignation Corcoran, Sr., informed the person who made the remark that Larry had received the very best support since the day he was born. Chicago set Corcoran on a pedestal for some years, but he lost his effectiveness and his situation simultaneously, after which he tried to pitch with his left arm, but not with brilliant success. Corcoran then became an umpire.

Jim McCormick, the delivering end of the once famous Jersey battery, forsook the diamond for the bang tails, and it will be interesting to know that it was his horse Alcedo which won the Suburban Handicap the other day. There was lots of good pitching material in Jim when he quit.

"Grasshopper" Jim Whitney was a great card in the days when he threw the ball for Boston. At that time a pitcher was allowed to run around the infield before delivering the ball. The lean, lanky James was in the habit of doing a running high jump and a back hand-he said to have equalled Galvin in effectiveness. When Nichol and the only Nolan came out with the curve pitch, tricky Bobby Mathews was one of the first to catch and adopt the innovation, and this change in his style gave him a new lease of life. In his latter days he had an extremely wide curve, but pitched so slow a ball that the batsmen had plenty of time to gauge and hit his delivery. Even in his most successful games he was generally batted hard and a large percentage of the opposing side went out on long flies to the outfielders. While Galvin had a decided curve, and several of them, he has also been a very speedy pitcher, and no twirler watched the bases so cleverly as gentle James. Until recently the New York Club had two of these sturdy old-timers, who for years withstood the assaults of the giant batters of the League. They were Keefe and Welch.

Boston had Clarkson and Getzler. No ball player took better care of himself than John Clarkson, and his career on the ball field was a long one.

One of the very best League pitchers was Charles Radbourne. His career on the diamond furnishes a wonderful example of skill and endurance. True, he failed somewhat in the latter few years, but occasionally he would burst forth with an exhibition of pitching that astonished the people, and brought the old Providence Grays to the front in the early years of the League. "Rad" latterly used strategy in place of the Lively Gossip of Interest Concerning the Doings of the Fighters.

Jimmy Reeder, of Altoona, will try to get another match with Willie Fitzgerald, to whom he lost a decision in five rounds April 27.

Art Simms, the Ohio lightweight, is going back to England, as it is said that several matches have been arranged for him in that country.

Joe Choyanski, who is the recognized light heavyweight champion of the world, has a very good offer to meet Frank Slavin in the Klondike.

Bill Crowley, the Hartford, Conn., boxing promoter, is trying to arrange a contest between Terry McGovern and Dave Sullivan, to take place July 4.

Jack Root, Jack Moffatt and George Gardiner, the pugilists who have engagements to fight at San Francisco, have arrived there and are already at work.

Al Neill has canceled his engagement with Shaughnessy at Seattle, and is on his way to San Francisco to train for his match with Charley Thurston.

Lawrence Temple, Joe Walcott's sparring partner, knocked out Bob Bradley in six rounds in New York city the other night. The men fought in private for a $200 purse.

An offer of $20,000 seems pretty large. Jeffries' refusal to accept the same leads one to believe that his eastern trip had some connection with the atmosphere in Wall street.

Big Fred Russell is in Seattle looking for a return match with Tom Sharkey. The latter has wired a friend in the Northern city that he will leave New York shortly for a trip to the coast.

The colored middleweight, Billy Woods, of Los Angeles, Cal., who is so well thought of, is now said, by the Alpha Club, to be under the management of E. W. Michelson, who also has Joe Bernstein in tow.

"Speedy" Robinson, an alleged pugilist of Dayton, O., and Jim Crumley, a detective, "hooked up" in the Gem City recently, rough and tumble style. "Speedy" was not fast enough and was badly worried.

"I want to dodge the drinking game," says Jeffries. This is the cause for his change of mind in not opening a saloon in Buffalo. It is a positive fact that Jeffries would retire from the ring on small provocation.

Ben Jordan and Jabez White are matched to fight at the National Sporting Club of London next month. Jordan is giving away about six pounds and as White is no slouch of a scrapper the fight should be a good one.

Terry McGovern received a formal welcome by the members of the Terry McGovern Athletic and Social Club, of Brooklyn. Two hundred and fifty members gathered in the club rooms with a number of invited guests.

Business being dull in the boxing line, Bob Fitzsimmons is thinking of taking up wrestling, at which sport he is pretty clever. A match between him and Gus Ruhlin may be arranged to take place at Madison Square Garden.

Charley Mitchell's Rathskeller, corner of Washington and South Division streets, Buffalo, will be a swell one, according to promises of the English boxer. He says this is not a Pan-American venture, as it is his intention to locate in Buffalo permanently.

Tommy Wilson, of Cincinnati, and Eddie Zang, of Pittsburgh, are matched to box twenty rounds, at 108 pounds; the battle to take place at Baltimore on the 26th of June for a purse of $250. Zang is also matched to meet "Kid" Monahan, of Butler, Pa.

Jim McInnis, of Hampden, and Tom Wilson, of Bar Harbor, met for fifteen rounds at Bar Harbor, Me., on June 11. The contest was a sharp one and ended in a draw. Billy Payne, of Philadelphia, was introduced before the bout and challenged the winner.

"Biddy" Bishop, manager of Al Neill, writes from Seattle that the referee gave Neill the worst of it in his go with Tommy Tracey, or Neill would surely have won the battle in the seventeenth round. The contest was decided a draw after twenty rounds of fast fighting.

Matty Matthews, soured by his defeat by "Rube" Ferns, the Kansas Interpreter of the Queensberry code, has decided that there are more pleasant things in life than being a fighter. Accordingly, Matthews has asserted that never again will he don the mitts and do battle for either title or money.

"Kid" Hogan, of Paterson, and Jack Woolam, of Philadelphia, fought twenty rounds the other night for a $200 purse at Paterson, N. J. Woolam was about ten pounds overweight. In the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth rounds Woolam was almost out, the bell alone saving him. At the end of the twentieth round both men were so weak that it was agreed to declare the contest a draw.

AN ALL-AROUND ATHLETE.

Harry Davies has just arrived in New York to confer with local sporting men in regard to challenging any man his weight, 105 to 112 pounds. He is at the head of his class in Chicago and the West, where he is well and favorably known to the sporting fraternity. His record includes the following: Harry Forbes, won, four rounds; Bennie Yanger (Tipton Slasher), lost on a foul; "Big" Hart, won; Joe Sturch, won; Jimmie Barry, draw in seventeen rounds; "Kid" Bernstein, won; Joe Lantry, won; Clarence Forbes, draw; Maurice Rauch, won; Harry Harris, draw, and many others. AUSTRALIAN TIM HEGARTY

WILL HAVE HIS PUGILISTIC CAPABILITIES

TESTED BY TIM CALLAHAN

If Successful He Will Have a Match With Terry McGovern for the Featherweight Championship of the World.

NEW YORKERS WILL ENJOY BOXING BEFORE LONG.

New Club Just Over the State Line---Arena Being Constructed---Sharkey as a "Grappler"---Small Talk About the Fighters.

Just how good a fighter Tim Hegarty of Australia is will be determined in a few days when he gets into the ring with Tim Callahan, of Philadelphia, to demonstrate his eligibility to fight Terry McGovern for the featherweight championship of the world. Australianistic critics say Hegarty is a marvel, but if my recollection serves me correctly we have had others come here bearing the same brand, but only two (Fitz and Griffo) ever made good, and until the newcomer is tried we can hardly rate him in the class of world-beaters, after his defeat by "Cocker" Tweedle, another Australian, who returned home disappointed at his failure to do anything startling during his sojourn here. The Australian explains his fight with Tweedle just before coming over by saying that it was merely an exhibition for Tweedle's benefit; that there were no officials, and that it was no sense a contest. There is no doubt that Hegarty holds undisputed claim to the featherweight title in Australia, whatever the distinction may be worth.

Hegarty has shown considerable common sense by not rushing into a battle, unprepared, with Terry McGovern. Had he accepted Harris's proposition that he meet the American champion on June 14 the contest would undoubtedly have been regarded as a money-grabbing proposition, and the public would have the right idea of it. As it is, Hegarty has taken a fair amount of time to condition himself for his battle with Callahan, and at the same time he has an agreement with Manager Harris that he shall have a match with McGovern in August before one of the San Francisco clubs, providing he succeeds in taking Callahan's measure.

This he will find a bit difficult to do, for Callahan himself is only just outside the championship class, and Terry himself will admit that the Philadelphian is his most formidable rival. Callahan has met McGovern four times, the first time getting a decision on a foul in eleven rounds. Then he fought two twenty-round draws with the champion, and the fourth time was knocked out in eleven rounds. This indicates Callahan's calibre pretty well, and if Hegarty can best him he deserves the promised match with McGovern.

To the lay mind the Royale Golf and Athletic Club might be the title of an organization of persons devoted to the middle-class pastime of creaks and brasses, but to those of us who endeavor to keep in touch with affairs fistique, and have known all along of the efforts which have been made to establish the boxing game in the State of Connecticut upon a firm and permanent basis, the incorporation of the above named organization, and its endorsement by the governor, means that a club house, or arena, for boxing will soon be erected within easy access of New York city. As a matter of fact, the building will be erected at East Portchester, just over the New York State line, and the work of construction is now well under way. It is to be one of the best fitted up places of its kind in the country, with a seating capacity of 10,000. The ring, twenty-two feet square on the inside, will be situated in the centre of the building, 125 x 200 feet, and the seats are to be so arranged that a clear view of the ring can be had from every part of the building. A pleasing innovation is a gallery, extending 125 feet on either side of the building.

East Portchester can be reached from the Grand Central Station in New York in thirty minutes. Indeed, the club can be reached in half the time it required to get to Coney Island when a fight took place there.

It will be two months at least before the club house is opened. No attraction has yet been decided upon for the opening, but it will be a championship battle.

In the meantime, however, the club has the privilege to conduct exhibitions in East Portchester or Bridgeport. An attraction will probably be provided for July 3 or 4 at the opera house in Bridgeport, or at Pleasure Beach, when an effort will be made to arrange a match between Joseph Walcott and Young Peter Jackson, who won from "Mysterious" Billy Smith a few days ago.

Some officious person recently circulated the information that Joe Choyinski and Ed Johnson had been indicted in Galveston, Tex., upon the old charge of prizefighting and would have to stand trial. I find that this is erroneous, that the people of Galveston are still incensed because the men were arrested in the first place and that it would be impossible to get a jury to find a true bill against them for this offense.

Tom Sharkey has become a "grappler." In other words, it is as a wrestler that we are asked to gaze upon, admire and criticize the famous ex-sea rover. Tom always was a restless mortal, if the limelight of public favor was turned from him. He has been more or less relegated to obscurity recently, and his last engagement, wherein he lost on a foul to "Mexican" Pete Everett, so discouraged him, together with his failure to get more recognition from the top-liners pugilistically, that he bethought himself to shift the scene. Hence, his coming debut in the wrestling world. Come to think of it, Tom should make a success as a wrestler, for, as champions in this form of athletics go nowadays, he is right in it. A monstrosity is the order of the day, and certainly Tom has ever been regarded as this. All your Yousoufs, Nourouls and immigrants from the Sultan's domain prove to be nothing but mountains of beef and strength, who smother men by their bulk and defy the strength of ordinary men for the same reason. They do not need a knowledge of the art. Neither does Sharkey. He is a wonder in the way of build. Short of stature, he has the muscles of a

Goliath, and it should require cunning and a considerable skill to down him, for his muscles are of the steel kind and not made up mostly of fat. His first essay on the mat with Tom Jenkins was not a triumph, but his courage in tackling the king-pin of American wrestling the first crack out of the box instead of picking out a soft mark, a la Roeder, must be commended.

Instead of sulking over his inability to get Terry McGovern into the ring with him at 133 pounds, Frank Erne ought to give his attention to some of the lightweights who aspire to his title. Come to think it over, anyhow, his insistence upon a match with a little 124-pounder doesn't reflect any too much credit upon him, even despite the pretty general opinion that the little fellow can lick him. There is a title involved and if Terry doesn't think enough about it to fight for it it is only reasonable that the claims of some of the other legitimate aspirants for it be given some consideration. Joe Gans, for instance, notwithstanding the fact that he emerged from that Chicago affair with his reputation for honesty pretty well covered with "soot," is a great fighter, and Al Herford, his manager, and match-maker of the Eureka A. C., Baltimore, wants to bring Gans and Erne together for the lightweight title. Herford writes that he is prepared to give a purse of $2,500 for a twenty-round bout between Gans and Erne and is ready to post a forfeit. Herford says:

"The last meeting between Gans and Erne was unsatisfactory, and I think the public wants to see the pair have it out again. A purse of $2,500 is good money these times, and if Erne is wise he will accept. The same conditions which characterized their last match will suit us. If Erne refuses to tackle Gans, why Joe will be ready to do battle with George McFadden."

If Erne is sincere in his oft reiterated assertion that he has retired, Gans and McFadden are the two most eligible claimants for the lightweight title and it is to be hoped that a meeting between them will be arranged.

The great Northwest seems to be losing many of the characteristics which made it attractive to broad-minded, liberal-thinking, reasonable people, who believed in an "open door" and the privilege of doing as one pleased so long as he did nothing to bring him within the pale of the law. Take Seattle, for instance. A harmless little boxing encounter which took place there recently was anticipated with more apprehension than any of the graver crimes in the category. A decision might have been reached in the contest between Al Neill and Tommy Tracey but for the strict orders of the police department to have no knockout. Al had to walk back to his corner every time he put Tracey down and the referee was instructed not to count until the man who delivered the knock-down punch was in his corner, thereby allowing Tracey fully twenty-five or thirty seconds to come around.

Nice sort of a "bunk" that was to give the people who paid their good dollars to see something interesting. I wouldn't be surprised to hear that checkers had been tabooed in Seattle as a gambling institution and that playing bean-bag had become a State's prison offense.

My friend "Hotspur" who ladies out pugilistic and sporting wisdom to the readers of the Buffalo Enquirer, got a chance the other day to throw the harpoon into Mr. Merton E. Referring to Mr. Lewis' recent visit to Buffalo, "Hotspur" writes: "Assemblyman Lewis who killed boxing in this State

It is always interesting to the followers of pugilism to know what the champion of the world happens to be doing and what his intentions are in the way of defending his much coveted title, for there are always aspirants for fame more or less qualified to fight him who are always trailing him up in expectations of a match. When Jeffries reached his home in Los Angeles not long ago he was honored by visits from reporters who fired all sorts of questions his way. Jim chatted freely with them, and when the meeting broke up all had copious notes for their stories. His weight, Ruhlin, Brady, reports that he was boozing and other important topics he touched upon. He gave a reporter on one of the papers the following interview:

"I weigh in my street clothes about 235 pounds. When trained to fighting weight I am between 206 and 210. Never felt better in my life, and so far as having taken care of myself is concerned, while I take an occasional drink, I have never allowed booze to get the best of me. If I take a drink everybody sees it, and that is how the stories get about that Jim has been boozing. I don't think any reasonable man would take much stock in that, though, if he saw me stripped, because I am right now in fine condition, and on my trip on the road I always had enough work to do to keep me hard. I used to spar exhibition rounds with Jack—that's my brother, you know—and Jack was fast enough to give me plenty of training. He has got good since he went away, and if his knee improves enough I will spar with him before a Los Angeles audience. He hurt his knee while with me.

"Yes, I am glad to get home again. I have been in a great many places and seen many things since I left the old town last, and it always seems good to get back. I think I will be in Los Angeles some time, and after greeting friends and staying home a while I believe I will go over to the island fishing and shooting. In this way I can keep in shape, and then, too, I will do a lot of training. I will fight Gus Ruhlin in San Francisco as soon as suitable arrangements can be made, and may not exhibit here before that time. Of course I would not want to take chances of hurting myself for that fight. A man never knows when he may do up an arm even in a boxing exhibition.

"How is my left arm? Well, I think it is just as good as ever. I had some trouble with it, but it is now all right, and I have plenty of faith in it. You know I always did use my left a great deal in fighting and so I would not take any chances with Ruhlin or any one else unless I thought it was good again.

"After we get through here we will go up to the city, and there I will fight Ruhlin. After that, if I win, as I expect to, we will probably show in California towns. I may do some umpiring. You did not know I could umpire a baseball game, did you? Well, I can, and down East they used to say I did pretty well. They used to have lots of fun because the men never kicked a bit at whatever ruling I made.

"Yes, I have cut loose from Billy Brady, but he and I are as friendly as ever. The only reason we broke was on account of business. Billy has several theatrical ventures to look after, and he is a very busy man. I will probably be seen with Billy Delaney in the future. Joe Egan is with me now, and we travel together.

"Yes, I have made money, and have tried to save some of it, too. I did well in the ring, and while I like to have things in good shape, and as they ought to be, still I don't think a man has to spend all he is worth to do that.

"That show I used to play in was 'The Man from the West,' and I had to take the part of a big, husky sheriff from Montana. Joe says that I used to do it well, but I guess the audience was the best judge of that.

"There are a good many stories that have reached here about me that are off color, and I think they ought to be nailed up. One is about that rich, sweet girl that the wise ones thought I was going to marry. Now, there was nothing to that. They just made it up to suit. Another time they played it on me was that beer glass story. There was a foundation for part of it, because a fellow in that saloon where the affair occurred was drunk, and he did spill a lot of beer. I was sparing in a friendly way with the proprietor, who is one of my best friends, and this chap wanted to spar, too, but there was no such free row as some of the papers thought."

CHARLEY BURNS BEATEN AGAIN.

At Cincinnati, O., on June 10, Mike Schreck, of Reading, O., was given the decision over welterweight Charley Burns, in the seventh round at the Oxford Athletic Club. Burns was no match for Schreck, the latter being on the aggressive throughout the contest, and left the ring without a scratch, while Burns was badly bruised. In the seventh round after Burns was knocked down four times, Referee Bezenah stopped the contest.

CHANCE FOR "KID" ASHE.

I read in the POLICE GAZETTE of "Kid" Ashe offering to meet any man in the country at 135 pounds. I will accept his challenge and will meet him before the club offering the best inducements. I have been fighting since 1892, and have never been defeated. I am the only colored man that can do 133 pounds at ringside.

HOW "SPIKE" HOOKED A HARD ONE.

Picked Out an Easy Mark and Got "Trimmed."

This is the narrative of the grievous miscalculation and melancholy downfall of an assiduous seeker of easy conquests in the pugilistic arena. William J. Sullivan, formerly of Knockmanoffe, Ireland, but now of Sheephead Bay, is the chief mourner. Among those who take an interest in pugilism Sullivan is generally referred to as "Spike," but for what reason no one has ever advanced a satisfactory explanation.

However, this member of the Sullivan family has always made strong pretensions to the lightweight championship honors. At the same time he has never decisively beaten any one of the formidable 133 pounders.

Two drawn battles with George McFadden, a fourteen round beating from Joe Gans, a twenty-five round whipping from "Kid" McPartland and a twenty-two round victory over Dal Hawkins constitute his leading performances.

His record is replete with the names of second and third-raters whom the only "Spike" has polished off with neatness and despatch. Easy victories and successive small purses in preference to hard fights for elusive large prizes was Sullivan's logic, and his history for several years past has been punctuated by constant defeats of men not in his class.

Simultaneously Sullivan maintained a continuous performance in the way of challenges to the leading lightweights, and thus created the impression that he was in deep sorrow because of his inability to secure any matches with first-class men.

Sullivan's policy resulted in the utmost pleasure and profit to himself, and matters moved along joyously until in an evil moment "Spike" selected one Joseph Handler as a promising subject for a speedy thumping.

Peter S. McNally is the champion long-distance swimmer of the world. He is a reporter, connected with Boston, Mass., dailies for eighteen years, nine years with the Boston Globe. He holds medals from the national government for life saving and several awards from the Massachusetts Humane Society. He bears scars from desperate encounters in saving lives.

A few of his long swims were from Crescent Beach, Revere, Mass., to Nahant, seven miles. From Bath to Fort Popham, Kennebec river, Maine, sixteen miles. Haverhill to Newburyport, Merrimac river, twenty miles, July, '96. Newport to Narragansett Pier, rounding Brenton Reef lightship on route, sixteen miles, August, '96. In July, 1897, he attempted to swim the English channel and got within three miles of the French coast after struggling fifteen hours ten minutes.

The impression had prevailed that Joseph's claim to glory rested on his relationship to James Handler, a middleweight of some ability. It appears, however, that Joseph deserves to stand solely on his own performances, and he therefore accepted with avidity the opportunity to face the mighty Sullivan.

The "easy money" affair was set for Trenton, N. J., on a recent night, and did not come out according to schedule. Instead of permitting Sullivan to take liberties with his anatomy, Handler from gong to gong pounded "Spike" like a strong man beating a dusty carpet. In the seventeenth round Sullivan was in a fog and would have certainly been sent to the land of nod but for the timely interference of brother David, who rushed into the ring and rescued his relative from the merciless thumps of the exultant Handler. Thus closes one of the most picturesque careers in the history of the ring.

HENNESSY PARTED WITH HIS TOGS

An amusing incident of the fight in Louisville, Ky., in which "Freckles" O'Brien whipped "Kid" Hennessy the other night is told by "Freckles." Hennessy's ambition has always been to become bantamweight champion of the world. Before his fight with O'Brien he spent at least $25 in buying tight, fighting shoes and other necessities for his appearance in the ring. "If I don't win from you," said Hennessy to O'Brien, "I'm going to quit the ring." Hennessy was knocked out in flight. After the fight he walked into O'Brien's dressing room and handed the latter a package. "What is in that?" asked "Freckles." "My fighting togs," replied Hennessy. "I am no fighter at all. Take them and remember I have retired forever."

ABOUT SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Newsy Briefs Concerning Men of Note All Over the Country.

Red Gilligan, at one time shortstop on the Greensburg team, has signed with New Orleans.

It is generally understood that Manager Morley of Los Angeles, is trying to sign Theodore Breitenstein, the left-handed pitcher of the Cincinnati.

William C. Whitney's famous colt, Jean Bernad, was quietly shipped from England recently. He arrived at Sheephead Bay and is now stabled there. He is in excellent shape.

Hinton, who is now covering third base for the Boston National League Club, played for some time this season on the Homestead (Pa.) team. He is said to be a promising infielder.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., is expecting the arrival every day of a new automobile from Germany. It has forty-horse power and has been tested to a speed of seventy-two miles an hour.

James R. Keene has announced that the Oaks stakes, won by the Keene stable recently in England, would be distributed among certain charities. The amount is $24,000 approximately.

G. E. Lattimer has sold Lamp Girl, 2.09, to J. D. Cullery, of Pittsburg, Pa. The mare will be trained to race for the Boston Challenge Cup, which is the greatest of races for amateur drivers.

Luther H. Taylor, one of the pitchers of the New York club, was born on February 21, 1876, at Olathe, Kan., and learned to play ball when a student at the deaf and dumb institute in that city.

All the Brooklyn players think that Rusie is back in great form. "He was as fast in the game as in any contest that he pitched in during the last five years that he was with the Giants," said Joe Kelley.

There will be a fair in New Mexico next October with a baseball tournament as a feature. Pitcher Hughes is trying to get some of his fellow Brooklynites to go out with him and try for prizes which are offered.

If any National League Club is looking for a good twirler it would be well for the magnate to turn his attention to Pitcher Cogswell, with the Dayton Club. His record is by far the best in the Western Association.

The Dayton Sharpshooters' Association, one of the oldest gun clubs in the State, concluded its annual spring shoot at Oakwood Park. In the 200-yard rifle contest William Isenberg made a score of 104 out of a possible 120.

Jack Barnett is back with his old love, Syracuse. Barnett pitched in Syracuse for two years and then he was drafted by the Western. He played two years in Kansas City. This year he has been playing in Waverly.

Charles M. Murphy, the bicycle rider whose race against time with a locomotive to pace him, a few years ago, obtained for him the title "Mile-a-Minute" Murphy, has given up racing and become a bicycle "cop" in New York city.

At East Aurora the other night Farmer Davis, the welterweight wrestler, defeated Robert Madsen of Montreal three times within an hour, gaining falls in 15, 16 and 21 minutes. All three falls were won with the crotch and wrist hold.

Julius Fleischmann, the mayor of Cincinnati, has sold his great stallion Halma, by Hanover-Julia L., to a European, for $30,000, and Halma is said to be destined for service in Poland in the stud of the singer-sportsman, Jean de Reszke.

With Rusie, Hahn, Phillips and Newton in trim, Manager McPhee feels safe on box talent, and may possibly loan Barney McFadden to some minor league team to acquire experience, the same as Indianapolis did with Rusie in 1890.

It is reported that Mr. Whitney would bring Volodyovski to America, but he cannot do that. He has simply leased the horse for $5000 cash and half of what the horse might win at three and four years of age, after which he was to be returned.
